Whereas, syllabi access to past courses is an invaluable tool when both scheduling and planning for classes, and

Whereas, numerous other schools either currently have a syllabus bank or are in the process of creating one, and

Whereas, the University of Tennessee is currently in the process of creating a syllabi repository for student use [1], and

Whereas, the only classes available on the syllabi repository are College of Arts and Sciences classes, and in which classes have not been added since the Fall of 2014,

Be it hereby resolved, the 2016-2017 Undergraduate Student Senate supports efforts to create a complete syllabi repository that includes classes from all colleges at the university, and

Be it hereby resolved, the 2016-2017 Undergraduate Student Senate supports the development of a procedure in which syllabi can swiftly and easily be 1) sent through through organized channels to be added to the repository, 2) categorized in the repository, and 3) linked to individual classes on the “course descriptions” page.
